Fairfax County Rental, Senior Housing

The Fairfax County Redevelopment and Housing Authority (FCRHA) currently owns 8 affordable senior housing communities and 2 affordable assisted living communities throughout the Fairfax County area. These communities typically feature gated garden style communities with one-bedroom units. Some offer studio or a few two-bedroom apartments and or are co-located with senior centers and other community programs. Additionally, the senior communities have emergency pull cords, common area lounges, laundry facilities and rental fees that include utilities.

Retirement Homes

Chesterbrook Residences

Almost 15 years ago, three faith communities came together with a common goal to build a home for older persons of all financial means that feels like home; offers personal choice; provides a wide range of high quality assisted living care and services; is located convenient to loved ones, friends, and familiar places; and offers an enriching environment for residents to thrive. Chesterbrook Residences believes that assisted living should be affordable without large entrance fees and with reasonable monthly rent and service fees offering value without sacrificing quality for our residents.
